

JUBILATION!

Christmas 2015

GO AND BE

I know a great many people who come to Jubilee because it feels so welcoming. The services on Sunday are comforting and challenging, with some really good music, even if NOT all the hymns are familiar. It's nice to see some kids involved in church, and the concerts and activities provide lots to do.

But, some of us wonder if there is more... Should there be more?

Getting involved in committees, or helping to host events; giving money (even more money) to the church or including the church in will or bequest... is it worth it? Should you do it?

This isn't a plea for money or a request that you join a committee, it's meant to be a brief answer to the simple question -

Why? Why bother??

If you look or ask around you might discover that Jubilee is a little bit different from some other churches. We take risks, but we do it gently. We invite, include and celebrate people who think differently, express themselves and their theology in a variety of ways. We invite the whole neighbourhood into our church life, regardless of creed or culture; we reach out to Refugees, the community of those on the Autism Spectrum, we provide a learning place for students and interns; we talk about God in a pub and ask children and youth for their opinions and participation. We speak openly about God and Jesus and really aspire to being the community that God dreams for us. We are embraced by our Muslim, Jewish, Sikh and non-religious neighbours as good friends and reliable allies. In 2015, that makes us a very special place.

And so, many of us get involved so that we can keep it going; so that we can continue to grow and change as the community and world changes; we join committees and groups and create new relationships with people, as we get beyond coffee pleasantries; we discover lasting friendships and the light of Christ burning within our neighbours and ourselves. It's not just about "getting things done" it's also about sharing our gifts and discovering the gifts of others.

When we contribute money to Jubilee, it's not simply to pay the staff and keep the heat on (although, thank you very much for both of those things), it's also to find ourselves committed to the very things that we talk about on Sunday: creative, open, loving relationships with the community, following God's lead and inspiration toward inclusivity and justice. I know a person who works in a Car Dealership. She works far more hours than she should every week and as much as she likes her job, she sometimes wonders if her job "matters" in the world. When she donates some of the money that she earns to a woman in Kenya trying to grow a business to support her family, this woman begins to feel that her job does matter. As she gives money to the church, she really does feel that work she does through the week supports the values and aspirations of her faith and makes it possible for others to learn and share those values. She really sees the connection and realizes that her hours at work are making the world a better, kinder place.

Those who choose to make legacy gifts through bequests and wills recognize that what we share at Jubilee is worthwhile, important and often in short supply in the world - and they want to make sure that it's still available for their children and grandchildren when they decide to come back to church. We recognize that people are different than in past generations, they often don't see the wisdom or need for the kind of spiritual community that is church until they are much older. There was a time when we settled into our lives in our early twenties; now many folk aren't ready to be settled until their late 40's... that's a 20 year gap: a whole generation. Wondering where the young people are? Many of them are in the gap, but they are starting to look, and what we have and do here at Jubilee will be of great value to them... if we're still here when they're ready in a decade. Many people want to invest in such a future.

In short, people give today, plan for tomorrow and get involved because they don't want to just GO to church: they want to BE the church. Whatever your decision, to "Go" or "Be", however you would describe your relationship to Jubilee, we're here for you and expect to be for a long time to come.

And if you ever want to talk about it, I'm not nearly as busy as people think I am... I'll find time.

Norm

That first Christmas
may have involved a child
but it wasn't for children.

It was for Shepherds.
who had aching backs and tired bones from working long hours...

It was for Magi who followed stars and hoped for the future...

It was for Inn Keepers who are misunderstood, not too sure about how open to be...
and not entirely comfortable with all of this "God" stuff.

It was for a mother and father just learning to trust each other;
still wondering how they got to Bethlehem.

I wonder if 2015 might be the year that Christmas is for adults, too.

Grown ups
who work hard and dream dreams;
are often misunderstood and only want to be careful as they learn to trust others... themselves... and all of this "God" stuff.

Perhaps this is the year that we at least recognize that we are in Bethlehem (even if we don't know how we got here) and that God is with us... too.

Suffer the big adults come unto me... Jesus said (or at least, meant to)

JUBILEE BENEVOLENT FUND

It seems strange to even mention the Benevolent Fund just after we raised over $65,000 for Refugees, a campaign to balance our ambitious 2015 budget and finally fix the roof.

But, some needs are less dramatic and can easily fall through the cracks. The Benevolent Fund is modest and discreet fund that I use to help folks in greatest need. There are no reports made or records kept; it is entirely at my discretion.

Every year in December, I invite you to contribute to this fund as you see fit. Money can be given to me directly, through the office or on the Collection Plate in an envelope marked "Benevolent Fund". Although we consider this to be an "extra", if it arrives on the plate or through the office, it can be added to your donations to Jubilee and be included on your tax receipt.

In the past year, I can think of a couple of lives that have been changed with our help and others who have been touched and supported by our generosity. Sometimes it's books for school, electrical bills, groceries... a bill that threatens to bring a fragile life down. We are there offering modest help and a great deal of dignity and respect.

I thank you for your support of the Benevolent Fund in the past and invite you to contribute again this year as you see fit.

Thank You,

Norm

The Flower Committee will be decorating the church for Christmas 2015 at 7p.m. on November 24th. We would greatly appreciate some help to put the decorations up OR to take them down on January 5th, 2016.

There is a plan -- we just need some extra people to help bring Christmas glitz to Jubilee. We really need some helpers who are comfortable climbing ladders -- the church looks so much better when the decorations are up high so that we can all see them - but our current crew of helpers are no longer comfortable climbing ladders.

Would you be interested in joining the Flower Committee? We would be delighted to welcome some new members to the group.

You are free to create new arrangements, or to learn by helping others. We need you!

PROPERTY COMMITTEE REPORT NOVEMBER 2015

PROPERTY has been busy with projects small and large around the Building, including:

Gardens - There has been significant work in the gardens over the last month, bringing the three beds by the Cross back into shape. Hope there are some people with green thumbs who can help us keep them in shape! A Japanese maple has been planted in memory of Des McCalmont.

Garbage Collection - Barb Secord has applied for and received an exemption from the City to have our garbage collected without payment, as we have charitable status. Savings are likely to be around $700/year for 2 bins. To keep the exemption, we need to be careful to separate items correctly for disposal. If in doubt, ask!

Lots of ongoing Maintenance - Waxing of the Tile Floors; fixing of the Women's toilets near the Main entrance;

Power Assist Doors - We've expanded the Power Assist Doors within the church to include the Universal WR at the Main Entrance and the North Doors to the Parking Lot. We will continue to review accessibility within the building.

Roof - Atlas-Apex Roofing is being engaged to replace the roofing membrane on the older flat roofs at the north end of the church over the auditorium and washrooms. Tri-Tech Weather-proofing will be managing the Contract for us. Atlas-Apex will be making temporary repairs to the roof in the next few weeks and will be 'on-call' during the winter. The main work will occur in the spring. In addition, they will be performing roof maintenance and repairs to the newer parts of the building this fall. This work is a major, but necessary, undertaking for Jubilee, and we will need the congregation's support.

UNITED CHURCH WOMEN REPORT

The UCW annual Fall Gathering took place on Tuesday, October 27th. We began with dinner in the auditorium and had about 50 people in attendance.

Following dinner, we were delighted to have Daniel Gaito give a slide presentation on his recent trip to Australia. Titled Observations Down Under, Travels in Sydney, Melbourne and the Victorian Coast, Daniel shared delightful stories and wonderful pictures of his trip.

The UCW is pleased to have made a $1,500.00 donation to the Jubilee Refugee Fund. It is a worthwhile project and we are glad to support the Jubilee congregation in this endeavour.

This fall, we have commissioned some liturgical art in memory of Janet Cleland. We have ordered four new wall hangings for the Sanctuary as well as a new set of antependia for the pulpit and lectern. They are being created by Bramante Studios in Kitchener. The design they are creating for us picks up not only the colours of the previous antependia but also the general colours of our space. They are hoping to have these ready for us in time for Christmas and we look forward to their arrival as we continue to have beautiful art to enhance our worship space.

REPORT FROM THE MUSIC DIRECTOR

Hello Jubilee!

I am so grateful to this congregation who have welcomed me so wholeheartedly into the fold. My first year at Jubilee has been filled with inspiring interactions with the choir, ministry team, staff, worship committee, volunteers and you, dear congregants.

Thank you, choir, for being so open-minded, hard-working and committed to making your voices such an integral part of Jubilee's vital tradition of worship. You have always risen to the challenge and supported my efforts to preserve the great choral tradition and add new voices and styles to the ever-changing sacred musical landscape. I wish to thank Barbara Greenwood and Julie Crann, who continue to help with a variety of choir tasks. Another special thank you to our wonderful soloists, Marie and Janaka, who provide us with such inspiring and insightful leadership each Thursday evening and Sunday.

It has been a joy to spend time at coffee hour in conversation with Jubilee folks over the past year. I am slowly putting names to faces and I welcome your feedback on the music ministry (good and bad!) as we move forward this year. I was thrilled to participate in the Order of Good Cheer concert series as a guest artist this year, and am delighted to prepare a special Last Night of the Proms Order of Good Cheer concert with the choir in April, 2016.

This congregation amazes me in its willingness to try new things, and I am honoured that Rimbala, my falls prevention seniors exercise program, has been embraced so wholeheartedly. It is an important part of my ministry here, because it speaks to the healing power of music and its ability to affect the body, mind and soul.

Please support the choir's special Carols By Candlelight concert, which takes place on Sunday December 13, at 7:30 p.m. This year, we are very excited to feature Janaka in the powerful Fantasia on Christmas Carols by Ralph Vaughan Williams. This work celebrates the awe and mystery of Christmas alongside the joyous singing that is associated with carol traditions. The evening also features Christopher Dawes, organist (formerly of St. James Cathedral, Toronto), and other guest musicians.

I also invite you to participate in the music program. In my music ministry, I have often found that many congregants possess hidden musical abilities. For example, John Clement, a newcomer from Eastminster UC, has been playing trombone for some services recently. I am always looking for new ways to enhance the worship service. If you can join the choir (we rehearse at 7:30 p.m. on Thursdays), great! If not, then perhaps you might be interested in playing a percussion instrument or a guitar at some point in the service.

Finally, I am honoured to work with such incredible people. Norm, Jennine, Anne, Pat and Barb infuse the ministry of music with such a wide range of talents and deep insight. Thank you all for being so patient, helpful and collegial.

Happy Christmas, Jubilee!
Daniel Rubinoff, Music Director

CHRISTMAS NOTES FROM NORM

This happened some time ago, so long ago that I can tell the story without fear of reprisal (that and my assumption that seeing as my sons never listen to me, they are also unlikely to read anything that I write).

Allow me to share: One of my boys... I will call him Ishmael (just because)... flopped down on the couch one afternoon as his mother and I were chatting amiably about wine. He said nothing... and so we continued our conversation.

He huffed and harrumphed.
We hardly seemed to notice.
He bounced around on the couch. He sprawled.
He sighed. He turned on the TV.
We kept talking (we may not be good parents).
Finally, he threw himself across my wife's lap.

"Yes?" we inquired together.
"Oh, nothing."

The love of my life and I continued to talk about Burgundy wines and the proper storage of such...
Then we got the "Look". The "how could you two old fools be so stupid that you can't see that I have something important to say to you" look.
"Ishmael," I intoned, "What is it?"
"I need some advice."

I checked again, carefully, to see who this strange child was who had just walked into my house and insinuated himself between my wife and I. Ishmael doesn't ask for advice. He gets it, mind you, but he doesn't listen to it and he certainly never asks for it.

"I need advice about women."

Ishmael was a teenager. I knew that he needed advice; it just never occurred to me that he knew that he needed advice.

"Well, Ishmael, having considerable experience myself..."

I looked at my wife.

"I mean, having almost no experience other than the one time I met the perfect woman, I would still be glad to help."

I got the "look" from both of them.

"Okay - so I was at the mall and I saw this really cute girl that I sort of know from school. She was with a friend and Chip and I were on the other side of the Food Court. And I told Chip that I really liked her.... So Chip went and told her. Right then!"

"That's what friends do. So what did she do?"

"I don't know. I ran away."

"You what?"

"Well, I didn't run away - I just sort of got up and walked really fast and then hid behind a door."

"Oh, well as long as you didn't run away."

"So Chip goes like, 'Ishmael thinks that you're nice and good looking' and she goes 'I think that Ishmael's nice too' and Chip goes 'So do you want to see him or anything?' and she goes 'Well, my friend and I have to do some more shopping, but we'll meet you back here in half an hour' and then they laughed."

"Ishmael, how do you know this?"

"Chip told me."

"Let me guess what happened next...They didn't show."

"Yeah, how did you know?"

"Women!"

I got the look again - mostly from my wife.

My wife then decided to contribute, "Well, that's obviously her loss. She should be sorry that she didn't come back to see you. Serves her right, tramp." (I think that's what she said; it was under her breath).

"Dad - what are you supposed to do?"

"Well, Ish' my boy... I'm a minister. I've taken courses. I've worked with people. I may have even dated women (I'm not saying one way or another) and it all comes down to this: the best advice that you will ever receive on the subject:

Next time, don't run away!

So, other than a quick trip down memory lane, what does this memory have to do with anything?

It's Christmas. We'll be singing songs, carols and hymns all about the Baby Jesus, Angels on High and Well Rested Merry Gentlemen; there will be dinners and parties, presents and tinsel and in the seasonal festival of Rudolph and a Miracle on 34th Street, we just might miss what's really going on: in the midst of dark days and scary times, God is reaching out to us.

That's who the baby Jesus is... he is reaching out to us, wanting to touch, wanting to be together. That little baby is God's Presence, promised, delivered and always...

And we don't know what to do. We're not used to this kind of attention... and so we stammer and blush. We can't believe that God might be interested in us...so we giggle... we hide... we shop...

we do everything we can to avoid getting to know each other.

You've seen it at highschool dances or parties, the walls lined with people pretending NOT to notice the people with their backs to the opposite wall. Nobody wants to cross the great divide...

But in Jesus, God has crossed the Great Divide... reached out in a vulnerable infant and offered us relationship. We giggle... we blush... we shop... we avoid.

This year, why not strike up a conversation... maybe even ask to dance... you know, when you let go of your fears and let your body and mind, imagination and gifts move and shake... rejoice in being human and being loved. I don't know if you've ever noticed, but it's been my observation that once one person starts to dance, pretty soon, the floor fills up...

So this year, maybe it's your turn to start the dance. Recognize that God is reaching out to you, and instead of blushing... reach out, take a hand and dance.

But whatever you do, this year... at least, don't run away. You'll be amazed at what can develop if you stick around.

Merry Christmas!

Norm
